From there he traces the science of light up until the emergence of modern physics. He shows how, as exact science advances, mythology recedes, so that after Descartes and the Enlightenment, myth and moral meaning was no longer connected with scientific research and the "facts" of the physical world.

CATCHING THE LIGHT

Brilliant study of the relationship between two fields usually kept miles apart: the physics of light and the metaphysics of the mind. Zajonc (Physics/Amherst College) begins with the curious problem of why blind people usually see only a blur when they first recover their sight. The solution is that "without an inner light, without a formative visual imagination, we are blind."
