If we can justify laws that take away the privacy and civil liberties of citizens to protect them from terrorism, then we can do the same to the banks and hedge funds who hold and invest Daesh's profits, or the companies that enable their black market sales, or the neighbouring countries that turn a blind eye to them. That's the bottom line.

Terrorism the Bottom Line

Terrorism is not a new phenomenon in the world and refers to a tactic, a justified reaction to oppression, a strategy, a crime, an inexcusable abomination, or a holy duty. Indeed the definition of terrorism depends on the religion, position, culture, and beliefs of the person defining it (Yungher, 2007).
